Abstract	The increase of refugee status claiming immigrants in Canada has led to a review of the immigration policy concerning this group. This report looks at the weaknesses of current legislation which is linked to the Geneva Convention and its Protocol, studying Canada's past adherence to the rights afforded under its protection. Also discusses public and government opinion on support for a humanitarian and generous refugee policy and questions of balancing efficiency with procedural fairness to claimants. Gives a chronology of events since 1969.

Résumé	Le processus de reconnaissance du statut de réfugié au sens de la Convention de Genève, tel qu'il est énoncé dans la Loi sur l'immigration, sert à déterminer si les personnes qui revendiquent ce statut y ont effectivement droit et peuvent bénéficier de la protection accordée aux réfugiés au sens de la Convention. Ce processus s'est avéré inadéquat, tant au point de vue juridique que pratique. Dans ce bulletin, on examine les mécanismes en vigueur actuellement et le projet de réforme contenu dans la loi C-55 déposé en mai 1987.

INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Canadian Research Index puts all of Canada's hard-to-find government and research literature at your fingertips. This monthly indexing, abstracting and document delivery service covers all levels of government in Canada, as well as institutions receiving research grants. Most titles included in Microlog are available in either paper or microfiche format. Combined with a microfiche collection, the Microlog Service is a powerful tool for finding Canadian report publications. The unique Microlog Accession Number is the key to immediate retrieval of any document.

SCOPE

Among other documents, Microlog includes research papers in physical, natural and social sciences, policy papers, important statistics, and annual reports. Every effort is made to ensure the currency of the index. For instance, documents appearing in the Checklist of Canadian Government Publications are delivered by Microlog approximately two months after publication of the list.

LANGUAGE POLICY

Documents issued in English or French are indexed and abstracted in the language of publication, while bilingual documents are indexed and abstracted in both languages.

SOURCES AND COVERAGE

Federal Documents: The Microlog editors review all checklists issued by the Canadian Government Publishing Centre and order every document relevant to the service. Except for serials, maps, pamphlets, and manuals, all monographs covered by the Federal Depository Plan are included in the index. Also, a special effort is made to track down elusive but important titles which do not appear in the lists.

Microlog offers a special collection of documents published by the Federal Government but not issued through the Federal Depository Plan. These titles, available to subscribers as the Non-Depository Publications collection, are indicated in the Titles section by a bullet (•). Microlog is also the direct distributing agent for many government bodies.

Provincial Documents: Depository arrangements with several provincial libraries have been established to ensure that Microlog subscribers receive all publications from those provinces. Where no depository arrangement exists, all publications lists issued by the province are reviewed for acquisitions.

Municipal Documents: Since these titles are very difficult to obtain, the Microlog editors make special efforts to include publications from municipal sources.

ACCESS

The Index provides access by subject, corporate or individual author, and series title.

The full Microlog file from 1979 to date, consisting of almost 50,000 records, is available online through Can/OLE. This is an ideal way to locate hard-to-find reports which may then be ordered directly online through the Can/DOCS service. Contact: Can/OLE Client Services, CISTI, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0S2.

FEATURES

Microlog comprises the following sections:

1. Titles and abstracts: A full bibliographic citation and a descriptive abstract for each title.

2. Name Index: Access by personal author, corporate author, and conference name.

3. Series Titles: Lists by title and number all reports in series in the service; series are available as an ongoing subscription or retrospective collection.

4. Subject Index: Descriptors based on Library of Congress and Canadiana Subject Headings are assigned to each document. A cross-referencing structure assists searchers.

5. Microfiche collections: Lists contents of each fiche collection for quick reference. These collections can be used as current awareness lists in broad subject areas to notify users of new acquisitions. This section is included in the annual cumulation as a separate fished product.

MICROLOG AND CANADIAN STATISTICS INDEX

Statistical Material: The Canadian Statistics Index (CSI) provides further access to statistical material contained in Microlog monographs and special or annual reports. The CSI identification number has been included with the Microlog citation for the convenience of subscribers to the CSI fiche collection.

Annual Reports: Storage of annual reports in a single sequence has been a problem for clients in the past. The CSI numbers for annual reports are now listed in the bibliographic citation and appear on the microfiche header of each report, to make such sequencing possible.

DOCUMENT DELIVERY

Institutions may subscribe to complete or partial collections of the documents in Microlog. Individual copies on microfiche or paper reprint may be ordered through Micromedia's Document Delivery Service. To order, please contact:

INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Index de recherche du Canada met à votre disposition toutes les publications du gouvernement et les travaux de recherche difficiles à se procurer. Combiné aux collections sur microfiches, le service Microlog constitue un outil très efficace pour retrouver les publications des différents gouvernements du Canada, ainsi que celles des organismes qui reçoivent des subventions pour la recherche. Microlog est aussi un service de livraison de documents, sur microfiches ou sous forme imprimée.

CONTENU

Microlog contient entre autres des recherches en sciences physiques, naturelles et sociales, des énoncés de politique, des statistiques et des rapports annuels. Par l'intermédiaire du service Microlog, on peut obtenir les documents qui figurent sur la Liste des publications du gouvernement du Canada environ deux mois après leur parution sur cette liste.

POLITIQUE LINGUISTIQUE

Les ouvrages publiés en français ou en anglais sont indexés et résumés dans la langue de publication; les ouvrages bilingues sont traités dans les deux langues.

SOURCES

Publications fédérales: Les rédacteurs de Microlog examinent les listes émises par le Centre d'édition du gouvernement du Canada et commandent les documents pertinents. En dehors des publications en série, cartes, brochures et manuels, toutes les monographies régies par le Programme de dépôt du gouvernement fédéral figurent dans l'index, ainsi que des ouvrages importants ne figurant pas sur les listes.

Microlog propose aussi une collection spéciale de publications fédérales non déposées, identifiées par un point (•) dans la section Titres et résumés. Microlog est aussi l'agent de diffusion de nombreux organismes gouvernementaux.

Publications provinciales: Des ententes de dépôt ont été conclues avec plusieurs bibliothèques provinciales pour que les abonnés de Microlog reçoivent toutes les publications de ces provinces. Lorsqu'aucune entente n'existe, les listes de publications émises par les provinces sont examinées afin d'acquérir les documents.

Publications municipales: Ces ouvrages étant difficiles à se procurer, les rédacteurs de Microlog redoublent d'ardeur pour les inclure dans l'index.

ACCÈS

L'index imprimé est bilingue et les publications sont répertoriées par sujet, par auteur (collectivité et personne physique) et par titre de collection.

Le fichier complet de Microlog, de 1979 à aujourd'hui, contient près de 50,000 notices et est accessible sur

Can/OLE. Il s'agit d'un moyen idéal pour mettre la main sur des rapports difficiles à trouver qu'on peut commander par l'intermédiaire du service Can/DOCS. À ce propos, veuillez vous adresser au Service à la clientèle Can/OLE, ICIST, Ottawa (Ontario), K1A 0S2.

ORGANISATION DE L'INDEX

Microlog est divisé en cinq sections:

1. Titres et résumés: tous les titres sont catalogués et accompagnés d'un résumé descriptif.
2. Index des noms: donne un accès par auteur, collectivité-auteur et titre de conférence.
3. Titres de collections: tous les rapports publiés en série sont classés par titre et numéro. Ces collections peuvent être commandées individuellement.
4. Index des matières: les descripteurs permettent de trouver facilement les publications pertinentes; un réseau de renvois facilite la recherche.
5. Collections de microfiches: chaque collection apparaît dans une section séparée pour faciliter la recherche. Ces listes peuvent aussi servir à renseigner les usagers sur les nouveautés. Dans la refonte, cette section est insérée sous forme de microfiches.

MICROLOG ET L'INDEX DES STATISTIQUES DU CANADA

Données statistiques: L'Index des statistiques du Canada (CSI) constitue une autre source de référence sur les statistiques contenues dans certaines publications indexées dans Microlog. Celles-ci ont un numéro d'ordre spécial qui est inclus dans la référence bibliographique.

Rapports annuels: Afin de rendre le classement des rapports annuels plus facile, le numéro d'ordre CSI correspondant à ces documents figure maintenant dans les références bibliographiques et est inscrit sur les en-têtes de microfiches.

LIVRAISON DE DOCUMENTS

On peut s'abonner à l'ensemble ou à certaines des collections de documents de Microlog. On peut également commander des reproductions de documents sur microfiches ou sur papier par l'intermédiaire du service de livraison de documents de Micromedia. Pour commander, communiquer avec:

Sample CRI Search

"How can a person from a foreign country qualify for refugee status in Canada?"

The researcher can search in CRI as in any library catalogue - by subject, author and title.
Because the index is bilingual, searching can be done in English or in French.

Recherche type avec IRC

"Comment une personne d'un pays étranger peut-elle demander le statut de réfugié au Canada?"

La méthode de recherche dans IRC est la même que dans une bibliothèque, puisque les documents sont indexés par auteur, par sujet et par titre. L'index étant bilingue, la consultation peut se faire en français ou en anglais.

The Draper site is a 15th century Huron village located about 35 km northeast of Toronto, Ontario. This document provides an introduction to the excavations and a description, analysis, and interpretation of the settlement pattern data. It describes the environment and history of the investigations, the 1975 and 1978 investigations, and computerized systems for archaeological data; gives detailed information on the palisades, middens, and longhouses of each segment of the settlement; and gives comparisons and interpretations of the main village, the south field, and the relationship of House 42 to the main village. Appendices include procedures for the cataloguing of archaeological specimens, guidelines for the recording of Iroquoian settlement pattern data, and computer codes for catalogue data and settlement patterns.

The Fraser River delta is the largest estuary on the Pacific coast of Canada, with about 1.4 million birds using the area and migrating through it. From March 1988 to February 1989, monthly censuses were conducted of estuarine birds along the upper tide line of the entire delta to describe the spatial and temporal distributions of the most common species and to compare intra and interspecies bird densities. Bird densities were estimated based on the censuses and species comparisons were made between three ecologically distinct intertidal areas.

The Acute lethality to rainbow trout of water contaminated by an automobile tire

By Scott Abernethy. Toronto : Ministry of Environment and Energy, 1994. II, 22 p. : Bibl. ISBN 0-7778-2381-0 MICROLOG 95-01063 (1 fiche)

It has been proposed that scrap tires be used to build aquatic structures such as artificial reefs and floating breakwalls but laboratory studies report that waters with submerged tires can cause acute lethality to several aquatic species, especially rainbow trout. No chemical cause has yet been identified in water or in animal tissues. A laboratory study was conducted to measure the acute lethality to trout of water that had been contaminated by a submerged tire. The trout tests were conducted on the water before and after it had been subjected to treatments that might reduce or alter the toxicity to characterize the physical-chemical properties of the toxicant to help narrow down the search for its identity. Daphnia magna, Ceriodaphnia dubia, and fathead minnows were also tested.

An integrated agro-ecological economic modeling system is being constructed around the Canadian Regional Agriculture Model (CRAM) for Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba. As an initial application, and to test its performance, the system was used to evaluate the resource neutrality of the Gross Revenue Insurance Program (GRIP) in the Prairie Provinces. The report discusses the interactions between the major system components of agricultural decision (RS-CRAM) and environmental decision; imposes the policy scenario being simulated on RS-CRAM, where management decisions are simulated based on expected producer response to risk and options available in the input substitution component; interfaces management parameters such as tillage level, crop, and crop sequence from RS-CRAM with the environmental metamodels; and then performs an analysis to evaluate the overall economic and environmental impacts of the simulated policy scenario.

Les systèmes de traduction automatique fonctionnent bien avec certains sous-langages extrêmement restreints, mais il est plus productif, dans la plupart des cas, de recourir aux outils de soutien destinés au traducteur humain. Cependant, des recherches récentes montrent qu'il est possible de produire automatiquement des représentations explicites (bien que partielles) des correspondances traductionnelles qui relient un texte source et sa traduction. Ces représentations, appelées bi-textes, peuvent servir de point de départ à la conception d'outils de travail qui relèvent davantage de la traduction proprement dite. Ce document porte précisément sur les aides bi-textuelles à l'intention du traducteur.

This study integrates stratigraphy and tectonically induced sedimentary alloccycles, a detailed thermochronological study including apatite fission track analysis, and a study of the structure of the basin centred on the Cumberland Basin. The paper demonstrates how these investigations constrain probable models for the tectonic and metallogenetic evolution of the Maritimes Basin.

They include the echo-sounding counter overestimating the number of fish that went upstream; the catch being greater than estimated from monitoring or sales slips; substantial mortality as a result of low flow and high-temperature conditions or other factors; or the number of fish that reached spawning grounds was underestimated.

It used to be that the family home was automatically included in the inheritance left by seniors to their children. The introduction of reverse mortgages now permits seniors to remain longer in their homes by drawing income from the value of their property, but at the cost of "spending their kids' inheritance". The advantages and possible pitfalls of reverse mortgages are the subject of this report.

Forms on component of a longitudinal study of early adolescent development. Aims to compare cognitive and competence approaches to social skills assessment. Measure social competence of a sample of gifted grade 6, 7 and 8 boys and girls. Uses as instruments adapted versions of the Social Means-Ends Problem Solving Procedure, the Life Planning Judgement sub-test of the Career Maturity Inventory and the Social Acceptance sub-scale of the Self-Perception Profile for Children. Results support the observation that broadband assessment strategies, including peer ratings, are more efficient and reliable than more traditional social cognitive tasks.

Existing translator's workstations still provide very little support for the central and defining aspects of the translator's task. This paper suggests the concept of bi-text will open entirely new possibilities for such workstations. A bi-text is a pair of texts (a source and its translation) linked by a set of explicit translational correspondences. The paper describes machine translation at CITI, the limitations of existing tools, the bi-text concept, the concept of a corporate memory for translators, tools for correcting written texts, and automatic bi-text generation.

While machine translation can successfully tackle some highly restricted sublanguages, it is in most cases more productive to turn to support tools for human translators. However, recent developments show that it is possible to automatically produce explicit (partial) representations of the translation correspondences that link pairs of source and target texts. These representations called bi-texts provide the foundation required for the design of support tools that delve deeper into the realm of translation proper. This document specifically looks at bi-textual aids for translators.

Les postes de travail de traducteur actuels se concentrent encore trop peu sur les aspects proprement traductionnels de la tâche du traducteur. Ce document montre que le concept de bi-texte permet d'envisager de nouvelles possibilités à cet égard. Un bi-texte consiste en un couple de textes (une source et sa traduction) unis par une représentation explicite de leurs correspondances traductionnelles. Le concept de bi-texte permet également d'envisager le développement d'outils de critique de traductions, capables par exemple de détecter la présence de faux-amis dans une traduction.

Ceramics, or the manufacture of baked-clay objects, was invented in different areas of the world at different times in the history of mankind. Having underscored that the description of decorative techniques is complicated by inconsistent terminology which adversely affects the interpretation of observations, this study then describes the principal procedures for decoration analysis, highlights the criteria to which prehistoric potters probably had to adhere, proposes a methodology for classifying the arrangements into relevant aggregates, and provides an illustrated compilation of possible decorative arrangements. This methodology is then applied to the constituent decorative elements, particularly to upper arrangements, illustrated in papers by a number of authors.

The Great Lakes of North America are one of the most heavily contaminated freshwater ecosystems in the world, yet they support at least one-third of North America's breeding Caspian tern population. To assess the health of this breeding population in relation to organochlorine contaminant (OC) levels, a study was conducted of 10 colonies (6,800 nests) throughout its Great Lakes range in 1991. The study considered residues in relation to reproductive output, diet, and population trends at individual colonies and examined the suitability of this species as a sensitive indicator of the toxic effects of anthropogenic chemicals.

Human and animal bone from four prehistoric and protohistoric Woodland sites in southern Ontario was analyzed for strontium, zirconium, yttrium, and rubidium. A subset of human and animal bones was analyzed for calcium, phosphorus, silicon, aluminum, iron, manganese, titanium, magnesium, and potassium. Soil samples from each site were analyzed for all of the above elements. The analyses addressed the feasibility of comparing bone strontium levels from different sites within a given region to make dietary inferences; and, if valid comparisons can be made, the indications of patterns of dietary change for Middle and Late Woodland populations in southern Ontario. The four sites chosen included the Serpent Mounds site, the Fairty ossuary, the Kleinburg ossuary, and the Ossosane ossuary.

FERIC evaluated the Swedish-built Bruks chipper mounted on a 6-wheel-drive forwarder, working on 3 sites in western Alberta. The objective of the study was to determine the cost, productivity, and operational feasibility of the Bruks chipper in treating roadside debris. The purpose of the chipping trial was to minimize roadside debris accumulations, thereby reducing fire hazards and increasing the productive forest area available. The effects of chip piles on biophysical site properties and subsequent seedling establishment are not well understood.

Cognitive consequences of becoming literate

By David R. Olson. Toronto : The author, 1991. 15 p. : Bibl. Paper presented at the Literacy Conference, Stavanger, Norway, 1990. ON-TERIS ON06482
MICROLOG 95-00866 (1 fiche)

Examines the social implications of literacy. Proposes that becoming literate does not merely provide access to printed information, but also affects the way one may come to think. Traces the emergence of the idea of popular literacy and later concerns with the social and psychological implications of literacy. Proposes a notion of "autonomous meaning" to characterize how texts are written and read. Draws on pertinent research studies in support of this proposal. Argues that the loss of meaning in written text (as compared with oral statements) leads to the formulation and acceptance of a body of knowledge in terms of facts, laws, theories, etc.

Après deux décennies d'existence, le système d'évaluation du rendement des sous-ministres fédéraux est bien apprécié par ceux qui en sont l'objet. Tel est le principal constat de ce rapport. Fondée sur 21 entrevues semi-directives menées auprès de sous-ministres entre les mois de janvier et avril 1991, la démonstration suit dans une première partie un plan en quatre chapitres. Le premier décrit le système d'appréciation du rendement des sous-ministres et en fait ressortir les traits originaux, le second porte sur le taux de satisfaction des sous-ministres, le troisième sur l'équité du système et le quatrième sur l'utilité du système. Dix-sept propositions sont formulées en deuxième partie en vue d'améliorer un processus déjà largement apprécié

Comparison of iterative searches for the quadratic assignment problem

This paper compares the most efficient heuristic methods for the quadratic assignment problem. These methods are known as strict taboo search, robust taboo search, reactive taboo search, and genetic hybrids. It is shown that the efficiency of these methods strongly depends on the problem type and that no one method is better than all the others. A fast method for tuning the short-term memory parameters of taboo searches is proposed and its validity is experimentally verified on long searches. A new type of quadratic assignment problem occurring in the design of grey patterns is proposed and it is shown how to adapt and improve the existing iterative searches for this specific problem. The usual way of implementing approximations of strict taboo search is discussed and better approximations are proposed.

Glacial sediment samples were collected at more than 1,450 sites in Frontenac Arch and the Muskoka-Georgian Bay region of Ontario and at 700 sites in the Gatineau region of southwestern Quebec to determine the chemical and mineralogical properties of glacial and derived sediments thought to bear directly on the sensitivity of terrestrial and aquatic systems to acid loading. The carbonate content, texture, and concentrations of naturally occurring trace elements in drift were determined. The carbonate content and texture provide an indication of buffering capacity, while concentrations of naturally occurring trace elements in drift provides geochemical patterns against which anthropogenic changes may be compared or where effects might be most serious if the cations were to be displaced into vegetation, groundwater, and surface water systems as a result of exchange or hydrolysis reactions with hydrogen ions.

This volume contains 5 papers with studies ranging from Late Ordovician to Late Miocene. Two are taxonomic notes with biostratigraphic implications describing a worm-like fossil from the Collingwood Formation in Ontario and the Devonian bivalve Prosochelus from several localities in northeast North America. The 3 other papers document new faunal collections from other parts of North America which, being from well bores, allow precise correlation. An extensive trilobite fauna from the Lower Silurian Tegar Formation of southern British Columbia aids calibration and correlation between 3 of the biostratigraphic schemes used to zone the Silurian System. Dinoflagellates from the Upper Cretaceous Bearpaw Formation in Alberta demonstrate the applicability of these fossils for biostratigraphic determination and paleontological analysis in a marine setting, and the sedimentology and paleoecology of new Late Miocene molluscs and palynomorphs from the Skonun Formation, Queen Charlotte Islands in B.C. allow determination of the climate and environment at the time of deposition.

In Nova Scotia, brush raking followed by burning is one of the most common methods of preparing sites for planting. Because of rising costs and the potential negative impact on productivity of removing slash from forest sites, alternative methods are being developed. This report summarizes the results of a trial to determine the productivity and effectiveness of corridor raking on six sites in August and November 1990. A survey was conducted to determine the percentage of plantable area, width of slash piles, and area site prepared.

Vehicle routing algorithms can be divided into three broad classes consisting of route construction heuristics that build routes through the insertion of new customers, route improvement heuristics that modify the location of customers within the existing routes through exchange procedures, and composite heuristics that intermix route construction and route improvement procedures. This paper describes a greedy route construction heuristic for the vehicle routing problem with time windows. This heuristic inserts customers one by one into the routes using a fixed a priori ordering of the customers. A genetic algorithm is then proposed to identify the ordering that produces the best routes.

In early 1993, the Nova Scotia Research Foundation Corp. was asked to design and build a prototype electrical fish stunning device to improve the safety and ease the handling and butchering of large fish at sea. The stunner would reduce the trauma of the fish and improve the quality of the catch handled by commercial and sport fishermen. The device would be used to electrically stun fish such as shark, tuna, and swordfish. It would incorporate safety interlocks to ensure operator safety. Testing on board a fishing boat was to be carried out to assess the performance of the stunner. Two methods were identified, the first of which involved a five-inch dart attached to a rope at the end of a pole thrown by hand, with an electrical source attached to the dart; and the second of which is a handheld spear with an electrified point.

Radiolysis of groundwater would produce oxidants and reductants that could affect the oxidation and dissolution of used fuel (UO₂) placed in a geological disposal vault. To avoid the extensive experimentation involved, a kinetic model originally proposed by Christensen and Bjergbakke to predict the rate of UO₂ dissolution induced by water radiolysis is being refined. This report summarizes the understanding of the mechanisms of oxidation and dissolution of UO₂ as well as other pertinent experimental results used in then of UO₂ as well as other pertinent experimental results used in the refinement of the original model. The model and its refinements are described and the rates predicted are presented. These predicted dissolution rates are then compared with the rates determined from the electro-chemical model. The limitations and necessary further developments are then discussed.

Paper production from recycled fibre has resulted in large tonnages of deinking sludge that must be disposed of in an environmentally benign manner. One of the most economic methods, the co-firing of woodwaste and sludge in power boilers for energy, has had limited success because combustion efficiency and stack emissions both deteriorate when the sludge in the feedstock exceeds 10%. This study evaluated an innovative inclined dual grate concept for drying wood refuse fuels using a 1:1 scale cold flow model. Nine woodwaste feedstocks were tested to determine the effect of sludge, moisture, and sawdust/shavings additions to a base fuel on fuel bed velocity for various grate angles and undergrate flows. Results of the study provide the base of information necessary for initiating development of a computer-based combustion simulation, and for designing a commercial prototype unit.

The Economics of chipping logging residues at roadside

The energy residue of forest residues such as unmerchantable tops and limbs left on site following conventional timber harvesting operations is widely recognized. Development in full-tree harvesting and the use of single-stem delimiters now offer opportunities for recovering logging residues directly at roadside. This study evaluated the efficiency and economics of chipping logging residues at roadside using mobile chipper-forwarders and trailer-mounted chippers and investigated the economics of transporting the energy chips to the end users' facilities. The report presents case studies of three biomass chipping operations. For each operation, a description of the equipment and working techniques used, characteristics of the study area and debris, and results of a short-term evaluation are presented. A transportation model is used to estimate transportation cost and a break-even price analysis is provided to estimate the cost of chips delivered at the end-user facility for varying transportation distances.

Production of maple syrup in Nova Scotia is a steadily growing industry, with the number of taps and total production more than doubling since 1978. One area of concern is the effect of tapping on the growth of small diameter sugar maple trees. This report gives the results of a trial that examined whether tapping trees under 25 cm in diameter affected their growth. The trial was established at three privately owned woodlots within Cumberland County. At each location, 20 pairs of trees varying in diameter from 14-22 cm were selected, with one of each pair tapped and the other used as a control. The trees were tapped in March from 1977-82, in a different place each year.

About 17% of the trees grown in provincial nurseries each year are bare-root stock. Techniques that moderate extreme temperatures and minimize excessive drying of the seedlings on-site before they are planted increases their chances of survival. This study tested various field storage conditions, including Silvi-cool blankets, to determine their effect on the growth and survival of outplanted red pine and white spruce bare-root seedlings originally packed in polykraft planting bags. The trial was established at Antrim, Halifax country.

Describes a study of the academic progress of Ontario grade 13 admissions, which forms the largest component of Guelph admissions each fall. Derives its findings from a database of all students admitted to the University of Guelph from 1980-present, and uses variables from this database as measures of satisfaction, success, and preparedness for university. Presents a sample of students from 16 Ontario school boards admitted to Guelph in 1989. Apart from occasional deviations, students from most school boards seem to perform in much the same way. Covers trends over time, student performance at course level, and graduation rates which could reveal much more about students' progress through university.

To support the efforts of various government agencies around the world to determine the contribution of the transport sector to air pollution, the International Maritime Organization (IMO) adopted a plan to address the potential sources of air pollution from marine activity, including chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs), halons, exhaust gases, and volatile organic compounds. To provide a Canadian contribution to this effort, Transport Canada initiated a study to establish an inventory of marine activity within Canadian waters, determine emission factors derived from on-board exhaust emission measurements, and establish the marine-based contribution to the Canadian inventory of air contaminants. This report describes the methodology of emissions sampling and analysis; provides the results of these tests; and applies those results to the marine activity profile.

Children with high ability in a given subject engage in task-directive dialogue much more frequently than do less able children. This paper examines the nature and functions of task-directive dialogue, and presents evidence that classroom condition can be created in which "less able children" can and will engage in high level of task-directive dialogue. The implications of creating such conditions is discussed. For example, it is urged that a similar curriculum for all ability levels be provided; individual differences in ability should be reflected in the length of time children take to become competent in a given subject, rather than whether they become competent. Ce document examine la question du droit d'auteur dans le contexte des progrès technologiques menant au développement des nouveaux médias. Les principales questions ayant trait à la politique du droit d'auteur qui sont examinées dans ce document comprennent : la propriété du droit d'auteur (et la façon dont les titulaires ont établi des sociétés de gestion collective), les critères qui déterminent si une oeuvre peut être protégée par le droit d'auteur, ainsi que les exceptions au droit dévolu par les créateurs (ou par d'autres titulaires).

An Evaluation of 4 methods of site preparation

Truro, NS : Dept. of Natural Resources, Forestry Branch, Forest Research Section, 1991. 8 p. : ill., Bibl. (Forest research report / Nova Scotia. Forest Research Section ; no. 31)
MICROLOG 95-00811 (1 fiche)

In the past five years, most of the site preparation in Nova Scotia has used the brush raking and burning method. Due to high cost and concern over the potential negative impact of removing slash from forest sites, research was undertaken to evaluate alternative methods. This paper summarizes the results of a trial to compare the productivity and effectiveness of conventional brush raking to the alternate methods of corridor raking, dragging anchor chains, and crushing with a Marden Chopper.

The fracture toughness of cold-worked Zr-2.5Nb is very variable and remains so after irradiation. This report focuses on variations in concentration and distribution of trace elements, one possible cause of the variability. The report describes the production of pressure tubes and their use; considers each of carbon, chlorine, phosphorus, oxygen, and hydrogen and identifies its source; describes the measures taken for its reduction or innocuous distribution; and reports on the efficacy of these measures in improving tube properties. Results are summarized as a comparison with the specifications of 1982.

AECL has conducted natural analog studies on the Cigar Lake uranium deposit in northern Saskatchewan since 1984 as part of the Canadian Nuclear Fuel Waste Management Program. This report provides background information and summarizes the results of the study, emphasizing the analog aspects and the implications of modelling activities related to the performance assessment of disposal concepts for nuclear fuel wastes developed in both Canada and Sweden. The study was undertaken to obtain an understanding of the process involved in, and the effects of, steady-state water-rock interaction and trace-element migration in and around the deposit, including paleo-migration processes since the deposit was formed. To achieve these objectives, databases and models were produced to evaluate the equilibrium thermodynamic codes and databases; the role of colloids, organics, and microbes in transport processes for radionuclides; and the stability of UO₂ and the influence of radiolysis on UO₂ dissolution and radionuclide migration. Foreign multinational enterprises and merger activity in Canada

While Canada has had some form of agency to review foreign investment activity and, in particular, the merger activity of foreign firms since the mid-1970s, there has been little analysis of the importance of such mergers. This paper begins by examining the importance of such an agency by placing the intensity of mergers in context of other turnover activity such as entry and exit and comparing it to activity in the domestic sector. It then examines the extent to which mergers are associated with productivity and wage changes. Finally, it asks whether differences between domestic and foreign companies are associated with the environment in which the two groups function or with intrinsic differences between the two types of firms that are not explained by the characteristics of the industries in which they are located.

Funding options : elementary and secondary education

By Stephen B. Lawton. Toronto : The author, 1985. 20 p. Prepared for the Ontario Teachers' Federation. ONTERIS ON06545
MICROLOG 95-00850 (1 fiche)

Considers choices for funding Ontario's elementary and secondary schools, factors affecting those choices, and the implications of those choices. Discusses 4 specific options for financing education: 1) retain the current mill rate equalization grant plan adapted to the requirements of the full Catholic school system; 2) retain the basic structure of the mill rate equalization grant plan but weight students according to level and cost of program; 3) institute a foundation grant plan with a variable foundation level based on weighted students and non-mandatory basic levy; and 4) institute a resource cost model (RCM) for funding on a program basis. Reviews each option in terms of 4 structural scenarios for school board systems. Includes conclusions such as replacing the mill rate equalization grant plan with a foundation grant plan.

This paper examines violent crime in Canada, how it is measured and how it has changed over the past few years. In this paper, we review methods for measuring violent crime and how these measures provide different views of the incidence of violence. From this evaluation of the statistical facts surrounding violence, we explore explanations as to why the fear of violence is disproportionate to the actual risk of violence. Finally, the paper ends with a presentation of a general framework for understanding the fear of violence, and possibilities for diminishing the threats posed by violent acts.

By the year 2000, the majority of the world population will live in cities. There has been an increasing realization throughout the world of the need to grapple with human-induced crises which are, in large part, the results of the lifestyle and expectations of city-dwellers. This document presents the Healthy City Toronto project. Topics covered are: implementation in Toronto; principal changes in the project (1990-1993); diagrams demonstrating growth of the project; strategic doing; healthy city as coordinating catalyst; and, what would be lost if the project was discontinued or dispersed.

Aims to highlight some of the consequences of the continued expansion of systems of higher education. Traces the historical process of curriculum and role change in postsecondary education leading from an elite, small system to a heterogeneous mass system of higher education. Predicts increasing public scrutiny of the costs of this expansion. Outlines 11 propositions to make the transition to, and for managing in, the "post-mass" age. Propositions focus on interrelated public policy concerns of access, numbers, cost/benefit issues, diversity, quality, and the role of higher education. Also addresses the issues of our ability to compete in an emerging global economy and the potential risk to liberal institutions, of which the university is one, of adapting to the mass market (deconstructionism in higher education). Calls for more systematic research and discussion to resolve these issues.

Highway traffic noise model evaluation study : final report

Sponsored by the New Brunswick Dept of Transportation. Fredericton : University of New Brunswick, 1994. v, 57 p. : ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 95-01048 (1 fiche)

Evaluation of the FHWA highway traffic noise prediction model, developed by the United States Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) in the late 1970s. The STandard Method In Noise Analysis model version 2.0 (STAMINA) is the latest computerized version of the model and is the basis of the study. The project was conducted to determine if the model could be used for the accurate prediction of highway noise in New Brunswick. The project examined the main resident parameters of the model and compared them to the characteristics of the N.B. vehicle population of cars, medium trucks, and heavy trucks. The results of the analysis allowed the comparison of noise emissions from different vehicle classes that was then compared to noise emission curves developed by other researchers.

Many studies have shown that the use of computerized learning environments permit a reduction in training time. This reduction is due to a number of advantages, both pedagogical and psychological, such as interactivity and individualized learning, made possible through cognitive tests and the characterological analysis of individuals. This new approach makes it possible to apply and integrate such fundamental learning principles as the integration of the individual with the learning process. This document looks at HIT (Hybrid Intelligent Tutorial), a cognitive style analysis and training program.

Aims to help teachers become students of their own practice. Explores narrative reflection as a means for teachers to inquire into their teaching practice and to think about their work. Proposes that such reflection enables teachers to evaluate their teaching experiences, reconstruct alternative practices where needed, and share their professional perspectives. Suggests 9 writing activities to help pre-service teachers reflect narratively on what it means to teach. Uses case studies of student teacher narratives to illustrate reflective action and response modes.

The objective of this survey was to continue development and refinement of methods for hydroacoustic estimation of Pacific herring (Clupea pallasii) abundance. The hydroacoustic biomass estimates determined during the survey are based on standard echo integration procedures. Acoustic estimates are compared with statistical stock forecasts and estimates that use spawn surveys and analyses of catch and age structure. Pacific herring in the Hecate Strait overwinter in the Browning Entrance on the mainland side of the Strait and the inshore waters of Juan Perez Sound off the Queen Charlotte Islands. These and previous year's estimates provide a temporal index of abundance.

Examination of the polynuclear aromatic hydrocarbon (PAH) emissions from two diesel engines representing state-of-the-art technology, one the DDC Series 60 heavy-duty engine used in highway trucks, and one a Navistar DTA-466 medium-duty engine used in pick-up and delivery type vehicles. The Navistar engine was tested for engine out emissions and with two different sized exhaust oxidation catalysts. Both of the catalysts were composed of a ceramic monolith coated with a palladium type catalyst. Both engines were tested according to the United States Environmental Protection Agency transient emissions test on a series of diesel fuels blended with varying aromatics and PAH contents to determine the impact of fuel quality on emissions. All diesel fuels had a low sulphur content to minimize the formation of sulphate. The particulate matter was collected on teflon-coated filters, backed up with polyurethane foam filters to capture the vapour phase PAH. The PAHs were extracted from both filters with dichloromethane and measured by high resolution gas chromatography (GC) coupled to a low resolution mass spectrometer. A number of nitro-PAHs were analyzed by GC coupled to a high resolution mass spectrometer. CA EV ND SC

This study is a continuation of the development of new applications for the atmospheric pressure fluidized bed fast pyrolysis process called the Waterloo Fast Pyrolysis Process (WFPP). The study evaluated two new feedstocks, a British Columbia hog fuel and an agricultural waste wheat chaff; further explored the composition of pyrolysis liquids for their content of high value carbonyls and lignins; and attempted upgrading tests on the lignin fraction. A commercially prehydrolyzed wood was tested as a feedstock for sugar production by pyrolysis, as well as other pretreated feedstocks, and some properties of pyrolysis chars were evaluated. This report investigates the anisotropy of irradiation-enhanced creep of cold-worked Zr-2.5Nb at 548-563 K using internally-pressurized capsules and axially loaded helical-springs. The test specimens were machined from small diameter extruded and cold-worked tubing that had crystallographic texture and microstructure similar to that of CANDU power reactor pressure tubes. The biaxial creep capsules and the helical-springs were irradiated for 9,525 and 16,670 hours, respectively, in a fast neutron flux. CA DE PS SC

This study presents guidelines for optimizing landfill gas production and minimizing the effects associated with its direct release to the environment. The feasibility of adapting these guidelines to a new or existing site is also examined. A three-phase investigation was conducted aimed at defining landfill practices leading to maximum energy and environmental benefit. Phase 1 involved the collection of material on ways to optimize landfill gas production and on the potential impacts of its uncontrolled release on the environment; Phase 2 involved researching or the development of methods to minimize the environmental effect and an assessment of the practicality of applying the methods of optimizing gas production while minimizing its harmful effects at active, closed, and future landfill sites; and Phase 3 summarized the benefits of controlling landfill gas and utilizing it. La production de graines de grande qualité est à la base de tout programme de reboisement. De nombreux travaux ont déjà démontré l'importance de la date de récolte des cônes sur la qualité des graines produites et ceci est particulièrement vrai en ce qui concerne les cônes de l'Épinette blanche. Cette étude vise à déterminer l'état de maturité, la profondeur de la dormance et la conservation durant un an des graines de l'Épinette blanche provenant des peuplements nordiques au cours de la saison de croissance 1992, qui fut particulièrement froide. En outre, l'étude pourrait déterminer si une graine immature d'Épinette blanche peut être disséminée naturellement.

McKinley Bay has been identified as a preferred site for a harbour to support oil and gas production in the Beaufort Sea. As the bay is a moulting area for several species of diving duck, this study was initiated to monitor the effect for harbour development on divers and other birds using the bay. Baseline information on the natural annual fluctuations in the number of birds were collected for nine years at McKinley Bay and eight years at nearby Hutchinson Bay, the area chosen as a control. This is the final report of the predevelopment phase of the monitoring study and includes 1993 surveys and a summary of results of all years. Aerial surveys were conducted from each year from 1981-85 and 1990-93 on the first day in early August when Sensitivity of the model to data changes is examined, and reoptimization of the model from the beginning is shown to be easily avoided. By a parametric analysis, a criterion for arriving at the optimal contour through intermediate contours of decreasing rate of return is proposed.

After establishing where we stand on the question of appropriation of technologies, we present guidelines for the organizational appropriation of technological change and define the conceptual tools supporting it. It is these tools that allow us to situate our objective from the point of view of applied research. We then describe the methodology by which we have undertaken our research and, finally, its application to various field studies.

The concentration of boron in a number of Australian and Canadian coals was determined to assess rank, age, geological setting, stratigraphy, paleosolality of the coal-forming environment, and the heating of coal seams, and to determine the amount of boron released during the combustion of coal. Data on the boron contents of coals from other countries are provided for comparison. Coal from British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Yukon and Northwest Territories, and Nova Scotia was used. The report covers mode of occurrence; marine influences on the amount of boron; lateral and vertical variations in coal seams; comparison of boron and sulphur as indicators of the environment of coal deposition; the boron content of heat-affected coals; the dispersion of boron following combustions; and some environmental aspects of boron in coal.

Généralement, l'épreuve survient quand la personne est déjà âgée; la personne conjointe est subitement atteinte de démence, elle est placée en institution ou elle décède. Pour un nombre croissant d'âinés, toutefois, la perte du conjoint prend la forme de la séparation ou du divorce; les couples âgés se séparent ou divorcent de plus en plus et beaucoup de personnes séparées ou divorcées deviennent des âinés. Ce document présente des écrits en gérontologie. On y aborde précisément l'incapacité mentale, la poursuite des soins après le placement en établissement des maris âgés; le veuvage au troisième âge; et, la séparation et le divorce chez les âinés.

The Beaufort-Mackenzie region of Canada has proven reserves of oil and gas, and although at the present time their economic viability is debatable, this area may be a future petroleum producing province as the resources of western Canada decline. In the first part of this report a number of known and conjectured play types are defined. The second part assesses resource potential and the third comprises an economic analysis of the undiscovered gas potential.

Kettle Point is a small point of land located at the tip of Cape Ipperwash, extending north from Ipperwash Beach into Lake Huron in Lambton County, Ontario. This study of Kettle Point chert, which outcrops on the southeastern shore of Lake Huron, includes petrological analysis and an examination of the spatial and temporal distribution in regional prehistory. The study used macroscopic, thin section, neutron activation analysis, and isotopic composition analysis, with the last-named providing the most definitive results.

A Pilot landscape ecological model for forests in central Ontario

By Larry E. Band. Toronto : Ministry of Natural Resources, Ontario Forest Research Institute, 1993. 40 p. : ill., Bibl. (Forest fragmentation and biodiversity project technical report / Ontario Forest Research Institute ; 7) ISBN 0-7778-1925-2

This project developed and applied a landscape ecological model to aid in the management of the mixedwood forest regions of central Ontario, particularly the linkage between the form and the function of forest stands in terms of stand structural attributes and ecosystem carbon and water budgets. The main processes were the forest's productivity, modeled in terms of the canopy's carbon budget, and the cycling and use of water. The report focuses on a modeling approach that directly addresses the processes of canopy photosynthesis, respiration, evapotranspiration, and runoff production at stand to landscape levels. The pilot region was the Temagami District of central Ontario. As much use as possible was made of remote sensing information and ancillary GIS data sets to reduce the need for ground measurements.

Direct blends of 10% ethanol with gasoline are encouraged in the United States by provisions of both federal and state tax incentives. Commercialization of extractive fermentation began with computer modelling and led to operation of a seven litre process demonstration unit. Construction of a 150 L extractive fermentation pilot plant was the next step. This project was conducted to build an extractive fermentation pilot plant of 150 L capacity, operate the pilot plant to demonstrate extractive fermentation technology at this larger scale, identify and address scale-up problems and process improvements, and generate design data for a commercial process demonstration plant. This report describes the pilot plant and its systems; the analytical methods used; and the two runs.

This study collected information to allow for more informed decision making about the use and enjoyment of national parks by senior citizens. A mail survey was sent to a sample of seniors visiting national parks in the Western Region, including Banff, Yoho, Jasper, Kootenay, Waterton, and Elk Island in July and August 1991. A total of 403 usable questionnaires were returned from the 1,116 sent out for an overall response rate of 36.1%. The project was conducted to provide demographic information about the seniors market; to assess the product-market match; to investigate policy changes that may influence use by seniors; and to determine the trip profile characteristics as they relate to management of national parks in Western Canada. Results identify group characteristics, trip characteristics, concerns, motives, travel style, and programs and policies.

A main reason for preparing sites prior to planting is to create an improved micro-site. In the case of old-field sites, it has been shown that single-furrow ploughs can be used to provide effective site preparation. This trial was undertaken to determine whether it was preferable to plant white spruce multipoints in the furrows or on the mounds formed by a small single-furrow plough on an old-field site. The trial was established in 1980 at Mount Thom in an old-field site. Before planting, the site was scarified using a farm tractor with a single-furrow plough attachment. In one block, trees were planted in the furrows, while in the other block they were planted on the mounds. Two years following the planting, the site received a band treatment of the herbicide Vision. The trial was assessed in 1984 and again in July 1989, five and ten growing seasons following planting. During the first assessment, only survival data was gathered, while both diameter and height measurements were taken in 1989.

Northern Ellesmere and Axel Heiberg islands contain unique exposures of pre-Carboniferous rocks representing the North American continental shelf. A large area in northeasternmost Ellesmere Island was selected as the site of a national park because of its scenic, environmental, and geological interest. The remainder of the region has economic potential, apparent from showings of copper, zinc, and lead minerals. Initial explorations were made from 1875 onward and systematic mapping was begun in 1953. However, because of the remoteness of the area and its rugged topography and complex geological history, a coherent stratigraphic-structural framework was established only recently. This bulletin provides a systematic account of all aspects of the pre-Carboniferous geology of the islands along with geological maps. It provides a basis for mineral exploration, more detailed geological studies, and broader compilations.

Larvae of the bertha armyworm can cause severe economic losses to canola producers in western Canada but are naturally resistant to formulation of Bacillus thuringiensis subsp. kurstaki available commercially. The only method available to reducing economically damaging infestations of bertha armyworm is to apply broad-spectrum chemical insecticides. In 1982, research to find effective strains of BT against bertha armyworm resulted in the discovery of strains that were highly toxic to larvae in laboratory bioassay studies. This report describes research to produce, formulate, and evaluate the effectiveness of one of these strains under field and greenhouse conditions to provide the basic data necessary to stimulate commercial production of the strain.

En 1989, le Conseil canadien des ministres de l'Environnement lançait ce Programme de 5 ans. Le Programme s'occupe des lieux qui ont été pollués par des produits dangereux d'origine industrielle ou commerciale. Le but du PNALC est d'assurer la dépollution des lieux contaminés si cette contamination nuit à la santé humaine ou à la qualité de l'environnement. Ce rapport traite des ententes bilatérales, de la décontamination des lieux orphelins, du programme de développement et de démonstration de techniques d'assainissement de lieux contaminés (DETALC), la responsabilité à l'égard des lieux contaminés, les activités du secteur privé, la décontamination des terres publiques fédérales, la formation, et des projets de décontamination dans chaque province.

Using the quasi-direct format in which the trip demand by mode is estimated by the product of two successive estimations, the first with a market share function and the second with a total demand function irrespective of modes, total and modal demand elasticities can be computed from the elasticities estimated from a mode choice model and a Box-Cox regression model with heteroskedastic and autoregressive residuals. A global measure of modal substitutions called diversion rate is derived from these two types of elasticities. All the elasticities associated with the two models, as well as the total and modal elasticities, and the diversion rates are presented in a well integrated table for easy analysis of the different components.

À l'automne 1991, la direction régionale de Québec de l'Office de planification et de développement du Québec accordait un contrat à l'École nationale d'administration publique (ENAP) pour élaborer une stratégie de développement international pour la région de la Capitale. Cette étude devait se baser, entre autres, sur l'expérience d'un certain nombre de villes et agglomérations en la matière et sur les opinions d'un grand nombre de leaders régionaux. Cette publication présente donc le résultat de ce travail exécuté par l'ENAP. Les termes abordés dans le document sont les suivants : les concepts; l'analyse de l'expérience internationale d'autres villes; l'environnement de la région de Québec et les enjeux mondiaux; perceptions des intervenants; région de Québec (perception et éléments de diagnostic; d'intervention; et, armature organisationnelle.

Under the Canada Land Inventory Program (CLI), all land in the province was classified and mapped into one of seven capability classes for forestry, wildlife, recreation, and agriculture. Assignment of forest capability CLI ratings was based on the interrelationship between top height, age, and peak mean annual increment. A subsequent reconnaissance survey, prompted by disagreement on the accuracy of the CLI classification, indicated that land capability for forestry had been consistently underestimated. A study was therefore initiated to develop a revised set of normal yield tables for softwoods that would provide the basis for correcting the CLI forest capability maps. This report details the methods involved in revising the tables and gives a comparison with the originals.

A workshop held in 1981 identified a number of problems associated with biological decomposition of wastes in landfills, such as gas production, surface subsidence, and contamination of surface and groundwater by landfill leachate. As a first step in initiating a research program in this area, instrumented monitoring sites were set up at the Leduc and Pincher Creek regional landfills. Automated data loggers were used to measure ambient air temperatures and temperatures at various depths in the buried waste. At regular intervals, gas samples were taken at the same depths and the composition analyzed by gas chromatography. Measurements were taken over three and one-half years.

Le système de sécurité sociale est l'un des traits distinctifs du Canada. La sécurité sociale dans le Canada de demain est un document de travail visant à aborder la refonte de notre système de sécurité sociale. Le document aborde précisément les points suivants : le contexte de la réforme; les emplois dans la nouvelle économie; l'acquisition continue du savoir; ouvrir des débouchés aux personnes dans le besoin; et, les principales questions à discuter.

Les programmes de sécurité sociale du Canada, qui font l'envie du monde entier, ont aidé des générations de Canadiens et de Canadiennes à vivre mieux. Cependant, avec les changements mondiaux, ces programmes ne répondent plus aujourd'hui aux besoins d'un grand nombre de nos citoyens et citoyennes. Ce document de travail vise à donner des renseignements sur l'élaboration d'un élément fondamental de notre programme, soit la refonte de notre système de sécurité sociale.

Salmonid smolts were collected during spring 1977 using fyke nets and inclined plane traps set in the outlets of six British Columbia coastal lakes. Smolt surveys were conducted by the Salmonid Recruitment Assessment Program as a portion of ongoing salmonid stock assessments focusing on production characteristics for a number of salmon stocks. After at least one month of preservation, individual fish from sample collections were processed and measured for species, length, and weight, and scales were taken. Summary data were calculated for lengths and standardized fresh weights by stock, age, and species. Length-at-age frequencies and portion of total run were plotted by survey data and lake system. Length-weight relationships were plotted by age and stock. BC CA CF FI ND SC

The Social contract for seniors in Canada : preparing for the 21st century

This paper describes what is understood as the social contract for seniors in Canada and looks critically at the key reasons that have been advanced for reviewing it at this time. It examines some of the solutions that have been proposed or implemented in other countries to deal with what some have seen as the crisis of an aging population, particularly in the United States, New Zealand, Australia and Europe, comparing the social contract with seniors in those countries with public policies for seniors in Canada. It traces the probable future direction of this social contract in light of known social, demographic, political and economic trends in Canada. It concludes with an outline of what is the most desirable future for the social contract for seniors in Canada, taking into account trends in health care, income security, employment and social services and describes how this future could be attained. The sealworm is found in the flesh of commercially important groundfish, and its presence is very costly to the fishing industry in Atlantic Canada. In 1988, a five-year seal/sealworm ecology program (SSEP) was approved to address the lack of knowledge. The program conducted research in population control of seals and sealworms; established the interaction between grey seals and fisheries; and studied seal population biology. This report evaluates the current knowledge of sealworm biology, covering early sealworm development, sealworm in fish and in grey seals, and models available. Appendices provide information on harp seals and the sealworm intervention program.

L'utilisation du gaz naturel à haute pression fait l'objet de la partie 3. Il y est fait un historique de l'utilisation du gaz naturel comme carburant, suivi de la description des méthodes de stockage à haute pression actuellement utilisées et des coûts relatifs à l'adaptation des véhicules à double-carburant. Les méthodes de stockage du gaz naturel envisagées sont décrites et analysées à la partie 4. Les problèmes liés à l'adsorption du gaz naturel sur un charbon activé, la méthode de stockage la plus prometteuse, sont examinés à la partie 5. L'aspect économique du stockage du gaz naturel sur charbon activé sera brièvement abordée à la partie 6. Finalement, la partie 7 permet de communiquer les conclusions obtenues.

The zuwai crab fishery, active between November and March in the Sea of Japan, peaked between 1960 and 1964 and has since shown a slow decline, likely due to overfishing. There is little information on the crab's life history and thus not enough information for stock management. This report describes growth and ages on the basis of the number of moults; the sex gland maturation process, from seasonal changes to egg-laying seasons; and embryonic development processes from the newly laid fertilized egg to a point immediately before hatching. It also presents the results of a study of morphology from the newly hatched pre-zoea to the immature crab and reports on changes in habitat as the developmental stages progress, including the planktonic larval stage.

The peat deposits of Newfoundland have the potential to supply a portion of the island's energy needs, particularly in areas where there is no other viable biomass supply. This potential remains underutilized because of poor drainage and poor drying conditions. A three-year testing program on the geotechnical properties of peat began in 1988 to develop a test method by which it would be possible to measure and monitor the bearing capacity of a peat bog from its virgin state through stages of increasing bearing capacity during drainage to the point at which the surface would be able to sustain traffic from peat harvesting equipment. This report gives detailed descriptions of the St. Shotts, Markland, and Point May sites at which the various phases of the study were conducted; describes the geotechnical considerations associated with peat development in Newfoundland; and describes the testing programs and their results.

This background document assesses kaolin geology and beneficiation techniques and determines kaolin end-use specifications. It conducts a detailed evaluation of the North American kaolin industry, including demand, production, competition, the industry structure, pricing, and industry trends. It also evaluates the impact of transportation costs on the economics of a Manitoba operation. Of particular importance is the Arborg kaolin deposit that appears to be of economic grade with tonnages to support establishment of a kaolin mining and processing operation.

In 1991, a joint federal/provincial program was initiated to monitor the presence of Atlantic salmon in British Columbia coastal streams. Based on recommendations following the first season of monitoring, the program was expanded to include monitoring in all B.C. waters (freshwater and marine) and a biological database was established. The monitoring program was established to increase the awareness of the presence of Atlantic salmon in B.C. waters; to expand the reporting of Atlantic salmon; to develop and maintain a database of the number of Atlantic salmon reported and/or observed in B.C., and to prepare an annual report of catches or sightings. The biological sampling of available Atlantic salmon was expanded to include a variety of ageing and growth structures and tissues, and a biological database was also developed. The program was conducted by contacting individuals, mainly fisheries officers, conservation officers, community advisors, hatchery managers, and major commercial fish buyers, advising them to return or report all encountered Atlantic salmon. Catches of Atlantic salmon in the sales slip and mark recovery databases were reviewed also.

This document recommends a reform package for the tax collection system that attempts to achieve the economic goals just discussed while addressing the real political concerns that the provinces have expressed. The paper is organized to explain the proposal and its motivation. It begins by setting out some simple principles that should guide the design of a tax system and then provide a summary of the current system of sales and income tax collection in Canada. The next part of the paper is a broad discussion of the federal proposal to replace the GST, as well as some possible modifications and extensions. It concludes with a discussion of a recommended package for tax collection reform.

Turning scientifically inclined young people into educators and researchers

By Dormer Ellis. Toronto : The author, 1990. 10 p. Paper presented at Ontario Educational Research Council annual conference. ONTERIS ON05779 MICROLOG 95-00860 (1 fiche)

Discusses the Engineering Science programme and its elite and uniquely Canadian nature. Uses enrolment figures to show that only 3 percent of Canadian engineering undergraduates are majoring in the program. Presents findings of a questionnaire survey of over 1700 graduates of the University of Toronto programme from 1938-1988. Survey examined why graduates had enrolled, whether they were glad or sorry they had done so, and whether they would recommend the programme. Compares this programme with other past and present programmes for gifted students in Ontario schools. Points out that the proportion of women in Engineering Science classes has always been significantly lower than in other engineering programmes, and that a spin-off project of the survey was carried out on female graduates. Discusses the positions held by graduates of programme, and explains that students may be unaware of the programme because of high school mathematics and science teachers' lack of familiarity with it. Encourages anyone who knows a highly gifted young person to suggest that they consider enrolment.

Twenty-year forecast of the electric requirements of the in-province customers of New Brunswick Power, replacing the forecast from the past year. The load forecast is prepared based on a cause and effect analysis of past loads, combined with data gathered through customer surveys and an assessment of economic, demographic, technological, and other factors which affect the utilization of electrical energy. In addition to the forecast requirements of each sales classification and total energy supply by month, this document includes a forecast of the monthly peak hour demand. Forecast results are used in the overall financial and facilities planning activities of NB Power.

A Two-phase algorithm for the partial accessibility constrained vehicle routing problem

By Frédéric Semet. Montreal : Université de Montréal, Centre de recherche sur les transports, 1994. 26 p. : Bibl. (Publication / Université de Montréal. Centre de recherche sur les transports ; no. 994) MICROLOG 95-00744 (1 fiche)

In the partial accessibility constrained vehicle routing problem, a route can be covered by either truck or truck plus trailer. After introducing an integer programming formulation for the problem, the paper describes a two-phase heuristic method that extends a classical vehicle routing algorithm. Since one has to solve a combinatorial problem that has some similarities with the generalized assignment problem, an enumerative procedure in which bounds are obtained from a Lagrangian relaxation is proposed.

This is a descriptive study that focuses upon two major forms of crime in Metro Toronto: homicide and robbery with firearms. It also examined other incidents that led to the seizure of guns by police. By conducting a detailed examination of the investigative files of police, to the extent possible, information was collected on the circumstances surrounding these incidents, including the types of guns involved, the legal status of gun possession, the background of offenders, and the charges laid. The study was also intended to clarify the nature of the information that could be gathered retrospectively from police records, informing future research efforts to learn more about crimes involving firearms.

Addresses some contradictions between the commitment to, and the implementation of, an emancipatory pedagogical agenda. Reflects on personal teaching experience in feminist literary criticism in a graduate decentered seminar. Considers the complexities of balancing the implicit/explicit course goals of personal and social transformation with the simultaneous discussion of personal and political response to literature. Discusses the discrepancies between what an instructor perceives to be happening (intended learning) and what may actually be happening (real learning filtered through personal meaning). Proposes that not only a common frame of reference, but also the willingness to accept the knowledge of the other person, must be achieved to avoid individual worldviews and group alienation.

The production of willows in dedicated short-rotation intensive-culture (SRIC) plantations appears to be effective in meeting feedstock demands for inexpensive biomass close to conversion facilities. This final report on Phase 1b describes the establishment of a second cutting nursery that will expand the clonal material to the required levels; tending of the first nursery established under Phase 1a; the identification of suitable farmer-cooperants and planting sites for the first of the demonstration farms; and the harvesting of cuttings from the first of these farms. This report describes the work progress; the survival and growth of the cutting nursery; farm site selection; harvesting and cutting production; and related projects, including the development of rust infection guides, a root morphology study, a greenhouse study examining clonal susceptibility to the herbicide glyphosate, a photographic taxonomy field guide, and an energy balance analysis.

To improve delineation of the migration routes and wintering ground affinities of the various Lesser Snow Goose stocks and to clarify the interrelationships of the Wrangel Island, Western Canadian Arctic, and Central Canadian Arctic populations, an international marking-observation program was initiated in 1987. In Mexico, the growing importance of the Northern Highlands as a wintering area for Ross' Geese and the western Central Flyway population of Lesser Snow Geese emphasized the need to conduct field observations in that area. This project estimated the number of Ross' and Lesser Snow Geese on the principal wintering areas in the states of Durango and Chihuahua; determined the breeding ground origin of Lesser Snow Goose stocks overwintering in Mexico by measuring the ratio of marked to unmarked birds, and the ratio of blue to white-phase geese; determined the incidence and number of Ross' Geese among flocks of white geese; and assessed the quality and security of white goose wintering habitat, and identified wetland habitats of critical importance to waterfowl.
